Docket Research & Effective Litigation Management

(60 minutes of CLE instruction)

Virtual MCLE Event   Thursday, June 15, 2023   12:00PM – 1:00PM PT

1 hour participatory California MCLE credit

Program Description

This course focuses on the importance of docket information and research and explores the best ways to utilize the resources available. We'll explore why this content is so valuable for corporate counsel as well as how to identify litigation trends, find information about opposing parties and counsel, judges and expert witnesses, to conduct due diligence, case evaluations, and to effectively manage litigation.

Learning Objectives

• The value of Docket Information and how access to this information will benefit your legal department.

• How to obtain docket information limited to various criteria, such as name of attorney/law firm, judge, litigant, the nature of the suit, keywords, and/or docket number.

• How to stay abreast of new filings on matters of interest as well as receive notifications of docket developments.

• How to use docket research to evaluate your case, to assess your opponent, judge, and/or opposing counsel to help manage litigation.

About the Speaker

Stephan Shields graduated from the University of Akron School of Law in 2016 with his Juris Doctorate, and received a Bachelor's Degree in Religious Studies and Philosophy from the University of Toledo. He joined LexisNexis in 2018, where he provides training, research assistance, and CLE classes to the west coast and Pacific territories.

Advance registration required: register via Eventbrite by noon the day before the program to receive a link.

*CLE is approved or in the process of approval for 60 minutes of CLE credit. The type of credit allowed will be determined by the state governing MCLE Board. To verify the approval status of a jurisdiction, email cle@lexisnexis.com. If you are licensed in New York, this content is appropriate for both newly admitted and experienced New York attorneys. Although, this content is appropriate for all New York attorneys, newly admitted attorneys cannot earn CLE credit for the completion of the course when presented via webinar or webcast.