

Quick Resource Guides: Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR)

What is ADR?

Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) is the common term for different ways of settling a dispute. ADR includes mediation, arbitration, neutral evaluation, settlement conferences, as well as special masters and referees. The law library posted a brief article about ADR Tools that you can read here: <https://aclawlib.wordpress.com/2024/03/26/toolbox-tuesday-adr-tools-at-the-alameda-county-law-library/>

The Alameda Superior Court has compiled information about ADR resources in Alameda County. You can find this information here: <https://www.alameda.courts.ca.gov/general-information/adr>

The Alameda County Superior Court ADR Program can be contacted in the following ways:

Telephone: (510) 891-6055

Email: adrprogram@alameda.courts.ca.gov

More information and lists of mediators and judicial arbitrators are available here: <https://eportal.alameda.courts.ca.gov/?q=node/402>

Forms

In Alameda County, the person who files a civil lawsuit (plaintiff) must include the ADR Information Packet with the complaint when serving the defendant. Cross complainants must serve the ADR Information Packet on any new parties named to the action. The forms are in a packet located here: https://www.alameda.courts.ca.gov/system/files/general/adrpacket_1.pdf

Alternatively, the individual forms are located here: <https://www.alameda.courts.ca.gov/general-information/local-rules/appendix-forms>

For Federal Court, the Northern District of California also has forms located on their ADR page, located here: <https://cand.uscourts.gov/about/court-programs/alternative-dispute-resolution-adr/>
