FORMS FORMS FORMS: FINDING FORMS AND TEMPLATES AT THE ALAMEDA COUNTY LAW LIBRARY

1 hour participatory California MCLE credit

No-cost, free event

Program Description

This session covers the variety of online and print sources that are available through the law library. During the program we will review sources for forms used in litigation and transactional topics. Learn about the sources for forms on Westlaw, Lexis, Bloomberg, CEB, as well as a few third-party databases, and we'll discuss some of the precise searches you can use to search these databases to find the forms you need. We'll also view websites that the librarians use to find forms and instructions. Finally, we'll review some of the sources that we have in library that are not available online.

About the Speaker

Pauline Afuso is the Public Services Librarian for the Alameda County Law Library, and she provides reference and research assistance to self-represented litigants, attorneys, and all patrons needing legal information. In addition to working in county law libraries for the past 13 years, she has worked as a reference librarian at Paul Hastings, the USC Law Library, and she also was a product developer at Thomson Reuters where she oversaw the development, release, and maintenance of several research features for Westlaw. She received her MLS from UCLA and her JD from Chicago-Kent College of Law. She spends her free time experimenting with recipes on the NY Times Cooking App and listening to Minnesota Wild hockey games on the radio.
